PHILOSOPHY

I have always had an enthusiasm for design, the articulated formulation of aesthetics and function, and the response to and expression of a living process.

What reinforced it more is my interest in placemaking, and the exploration of the concept of 'landscape', as an interaction, a medium, and a dialogue between man and nature.

Landscape architect plays an important role in balancing the relationship between man and nature, in our interrelated, complex, and constantly evolving system of ecology.

To assume the responsibility as landscape architect, I believe in a multidisciplinary approach that build on integrations of ecology, landscape urbanism and placemaking with a focus on the wellbeing of people and a goal of improving our built and unbuilt environment in a resilient and sustainable way.
